Fixing the Time.

In a murder trial in Cincinnati a negro hotel porter was called as a witness. "How many shots were fired?" he was asked.

"Two shots, suh," he answered.

"Close together?"

"Des laik dat, suh," he said, slapping his hands sharply as quick as he could.

"Where were you when the first was fired?"

"I was in de basemen' of de hotel, suh, shinin' a gemman's shoes."

"And when the second shot was fired where were you?"

"At dat time, suh, I was passin' de Big Fo' depot."—Green Bag.

Ambulance Chasers.

One of our respected subscribers, the attorney for a railroad company in a large eastern city sends us the following notice which was served on him by one of the "ambulance chasers" of that city, which we have copied exactly as it was sent to us.
